Thomas Jefferson was an excellent persuasive writer. Conceivably his most persuasive piece of writing was the Declaration of Independence, on which he was asked to collaborate with John Adams and Benjamin Franklin to justify the necessity for independence. We all should recognize elements of that document. For example, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.

Who was Shakespeare? Few would question that he was the greatest individual, or one of the greatest individuals, ever to write a play. His works have endured the test of time. Productions of his plays continue to take place on the stages of theaters all over the world. Shakespeare was an expert at creating comedies and tragedies, both of which often leave the audience in tears.

Few of those who put pen to paper have been as successful at creating prized images for their reader as Shakespeare. Every character he created has a life of its own. It is entirely possible that more middle school and high school students know about the tragedy that Romeo and Juliet experienced than know about the one that took place at Pearl Harbor.
