You must be an extra-special individual if you are recognized throughout the world. Eleanor Roosevelt was such a person. All through her life she took up the cause of the less fortunate. Quite often you could find her trying to help people out of work.

Women's issues, racial issues, and youth issues were other causes that she spent an amazing amount of time working on. Being the first lady gave her a platform to further these causes. Serving on the United Nations gave her the opportunity to continue to promote these just causes on the world level.
